“Collaborative Research: Interests, Institutions, and Foreign Policy Change”

The CHISOLS data and all supporting documentation are available at www.chisols.org.

We ask end users to send information about any possible discrepancies or errors in the data to the P.I.s at the above email addresses.

This document lists all the sources consulted in coding the CHISOLS data, version 4.0. The sources are listed in two sections. The first section includes news and web sources, and the second section (which begins on page 61) includes article and book sources. The individual country narratives also include bibliographies listing the sources consulted in coding the data for that country. This bibliography aggregates all the sources for all the country coding decisions, and also includes sources consulted for more general information relevant to data coding.
